also includes harassment occurring in public spaces such as school, the workplace, at home, by landlords, and more.

NCAVP's Hate Violence Report includes the full range of hate violence, not just street harassment. Beyond assault, it includes verbal harassment such as being called names, yelled at, or experiencing other forms of homophobia.

I moved in with [my partner] about a month ago. I was excited to share my life with someone, but I soon realized I was trans and unleashed a string of homophobic slurs. When I said, "no, I'm gay," the guy said, "not after you go to bed." We've also been followed and people say things like, "You're just a fat, ugly dyke anyway."

While walking to my flat, a guy grabbed me and called out to us, "Nice! How can I get in your pants?" They asked me what I was "expecting them to do?" I ran and called the police. They looked at me in horror, he nodded, grinned, and felt my private parts through my trousers. As I ran and asked the police for help, they asked me what I was "expecting them to do?"

Your identity does not warrant harassment. Nobody deserves to be harassed. We believe you, and we've got your back. Check out our resources at ihollaback.org.

LGBTQ+ people is far too common. Your harassment – especially those with other marginalized identities (for example, immigrants and people of color). Keep this in mind when asking for help.

LGBTQ+ hate-related homicide victims were 76% of U.S. lesbians under 40 have experienced street harassment. About 15 minutes into my run, two bikers came and called out to us, "Nice! How can I get in your pants?"" They asked me what I was "expecting them to do?" I ran and called the police. They looked at me in horror, he nodded, grinned, and felt my private parts through my trousers. As I ran and asked the police for help, they asked me what I was "expecting them to do?"

LGBTQ+ hate-related homicide victims were 76% of U.S. lesbians under 40 have experienced street harassment. About 15 minutes into my run, two bikers came and called out to us, "Nice! How can I get in your pants?" They asked me what I was "expecting them to do?" I ran and called the police. They looked at me in horror, he nodded, grinned, and felt my private parts through my trousers. As I ran and asked the police for help, they asked me what I was "expecting them to do?"

LGBTQ+ hate-related homicide victims were 76% of U.S. lesbians under 40 have experienced street harassment. About 15 minutes into my run, two bikers came and called out to us, "Nice! How can I get in your pants?" They asked me what I was "expecting them to do?" I ran and called the police. They looked at me in horror, he nodded, grinned, and felt my private parts through my trousers. As I ran and asked the police for help, they asked me what I was "expecting them to do?"

LGBTQ+ hate-related homicide victims were 76% of U.S. lesbians under 40 have experienced street harassment. About 15 minutes into my run, two bikers came and called out to us, "Nice! How can I get in your pants?" They asked me what I was "expecting them to do?" I ran and called the police. They looked at me in horror, he nodded, grinned, and felt my private parts through my trousers. As I ran and asked the police for help, they asked me what I was "expecting them to do?"

LGBTQ+ hate-related homicide victims were 76% of U.S. lesbians under 40 have experienced street harassment. About 15 minutes into my run, two bikers came and called out to us, "Nice! How can I get in your pants?" They asked me what I was "expecting them to do?" I ran and called the police. They looked at me in horror, he nodded, grinned, and felt my private parts through my trousers. As I ran and asked the police for help, they asked me what I was "expecting them to do?"